University Awards

2015

WINNER - INDIVIDUAL

Dr Tinashe Dune, Lecturer in Interprofessional Health Science, School of Science and Health

Dr Dune is a nationally renowned educator whose innovative and engaging approach to student learning reflects key focus areas of the University (e.g., a distinctively student-centred University which provides a unique learning experience that is innovative, flexible and responsive). Dr Dune has demonstrated this in an exemplary fashion by employing a partners-in-learning framework, which acknowledges students as agents of learning and dynamic learners whose needs change and evolve. Her teaching speaks directly to the University's focus on a dynamic and innovative culture that secures success not only in her efforts towards student retention and satisfaction but also in her research, which informs her teaching, on the influence of social determinants of health (i.e., experiences of marginalisation and marginalised identities) and their relationships to local, national, and global health.
